ABSTRACT

This undergraduate thesis tried to discuss about the background of the tight policy of Chinese government on Google.cn. The issue came up on 2009 when China started to block the access to several services of Google. For the first time Google came to China they agreed to obey the rule from the Chinese government. Even though Google has given contribution to China, especially in information technology, the government still took the tight policy on Google.cn. Communist regime plays an important role in this case. The ultimate objective is to derive why China took a tight policy on Google which has given contribution for China. The result is Chinese Government took a tight policy to Google.cn because of their perception based on structural, historical, and socio-cultural dimensions.
